IVAP Return on Investment

“Retention is the most important to me as a veterinarian and business owner. If we can keep people engaged, they will have a higher level of professional satisfaction, and we get better patient/customer service.”

- Seth Solomon, DVM & Practice Owner

“The more we take off the DVM plate to see more clients, the more we can build the business that way. DVMs don’t need to be running labs, they need to be creating bonds with the clients.”

- Megan Hutchens, Practice Manager

“Skills development is crucial because they can jump in and help the technician gather materials for diagnostics or other tasks to aid the DVM in their cases and get an answer faster for the client.”

- Emily Hinojosa, Licensed Veterinary Technician

A more highly trained veterinary assistant will help the overall productivity of the hospital:

- ✓ Preparing & Running Labs
- ✓ Consistent Client Experiences
- ✓ Safely Restraining Animals
- ✓ Improved Communications
- ✓ Professional Staff Image
- ✓ Supporting Other Staff
